Next day she feigned illness, and by money and fine words persuaded the physicians to tell the Padishah that his consort was dangerously ill and only by eating a stag's heart could she hope for recovery. These women were the padishah's favorites, basically his mistresses. The highest position in the harem was the Valide Sultana, the mother of the sultan. Thesamethinghappenedonthethirddaylikewise. The end of the harem at Topkapi came in the 19th century when the padishahs decided to move into the Yildiz Palace. Now it chanced that the Padishah's horses were accustomed to be watered from the spring by the tree. It was very thoughtless of her to betray herself in the presence of a stranger.
