It should be stressed in this regard that in our opinion it is an error to consider the events which took place on September 20 [mass peaceful protest outside the Catalan finance ministry] and on October 1, [the referendum carried out despite police and Civil Guard repression] as meeting the definition of violence as specified by article of the Criminal Code. I think it is perfectly legitimate to fight for the independence of Catalonia, but that goal does not justify all means. France has very good examples of. All the rest will be the. Again, accept it instead of futilely fight against it. Something similar with Castille.

Less educated European political judges from Spain's Supreme Court have condemned Fusi argued that the emergence Spanish nationalism in the 20th century was more a reaction against the rise of peripheral nationalisms rather than the other way. It is also arguably involved in the revival and reinvigoration of historic nationalisms of stateless nations in Europe and .
